How To Use Your iPhone as a Hotspot for the iPad Pro

By Henry T. Casey | November 25, 2015 03:36 pm

Unless you've splurged on the most expensive version of the iPad Pro (the $1,079 128GB model), your new tablet doesn't have a cellular modem, rendering it unable to surf the web, send messages or stream video if you're away from the glory of Wi-Fi. Luckily, though, you can share your iPhone's cellular signal with the iPad Pro, allowing your giant slate to connect to the Internet.

(Note: While some cellular providers don't have any additional charges to use your iPhone as a hotspot, some may. It's best to check your provider's rules and regulations first, lest you incur extra fees.)
